Dear Steve,

RE: Local Government and Protecting Jobs during Coronavirus Outbreak

The Urban Development Institute of Australia Queensland (the Institute) writes to Bundaberg Regional Council (council) in relation to the outbreak of the Coronavirus (COVID-19). The Institute holds significant concerns about the impact of COVID-19 on employment in the property industry noting that one in ten Queenslanders are employed by our industry. In writing, we acknowledge local government is also facing substantial challenges at this time including the responsibility for the delivery of essential services.

As mentioned above, the development industry is the third largest industry of employment within the State, directly employing 10% of the Queensland workforce, and indirectly supporting a further 13%. The development industry employs a variety of trades and professions contributing more than 200,000 direct jobs and more than that number again with 257,962 indirect jobs generated. The industry also contributes more than $14.2 billion in wages.<sup>1</sup>

Further, the property industry plays a significant role in the support of local businesses - 85% of development industry expenditure is spent on local goods and services (i.e. from Queensland).

In light of these circumstances, we seek your assistance in protecting jobs by maintaining stability in the development industry as a crucial part of your COVID 19 strategy.

Given the situation, we recommend council undertake actions and initiatives to ensure services to the industry and be adaptive to facilitate development outcomes. In addition, we strongly encourage council to maintain an open dialogue and engagement with the industry on communication regarding development applications before any action is taken to extend timeframes is critical.

These solutions may, in the short term, mitigate the impacts, assist in productivity, and ensures the industry is ready to respond once this situation is resolved. Ideas raised by members that could be considered include:

- putting in place consultants to outsource development assessment to alleviate potential resource deficiencies
- emphasis on timely plan sealing and pre-seal inspections to ensure project delivery
- expanding the matters that can be included for on and off maintenance bonding to spread the assessment load
- home builders grant worth $5,000 to boost local employment
- delay infrastructure charges until the sale and settlement of land.

Thank you for taking the time to consider our letter. The Institute offers its support to council in assisting where we can to ensure the property industry continues to operate in the current circumstances. If you have any questions, please contact Manager of Policy, Martin Zaltron (mzaltron@udiaqld.com.au) on (07) 3229 1589.

Yours sincerely,

Urban Development Institute of Australia Queensland
